What We Know

70,000+
LGB Military Families  (Gates, 2010)

16,000+
LGB Military Families with Children  (Gates, 2011)

1 million+
LGB Veterans  (Gates, 2003)
DADT: A Brief History

- Est. in 1993 as a result of a compromise when President Clinton attempted to lift the ban on gays and lesbians serving in the Armed Forces

- DADT intended to bar from service those who disclosed a Lesbian, Gay or Bisexual (LGB) identity to others

- Unintended results:
  - Frequently used to investigate and discharge existing military personnel who were suspected or accused of being LGB

- Over 14,000 service members were discharged under the DADT policy (SLDN, n.d.)
Under DADT...

- Families of LGB service members were completely invisible
- Isolation: no formal resources through which to connect with one another or to the military community
- No access to FRGs or other military family support programs
- Service members were discharged under DADT at the whim of their particular command
Under DADT...

- LGB Families also lacked “human” benefits
  - Unable to attend promotion ceremonies and other military functions
  - Often forced children to lie about their parents’ relationship
  - Unable to attend deployment send-offs and welcome-home ceremonies
  - Civilian partner also forced into a “closet”
Under DADT...and currently

- LGB partners and families ineligible for the spousal benefits awarded to every other military family
  - TRICARE
  - Military-subsidized life insurance
  - Legal services
  - Deployment separation pay
  - Surviving spouse benefits
  - Family-rate housing allowance
  - Adequate funds for PCS
  - Military dependent ID card for base/post access
    - Child care
    - Commissary, gas, veterinary services, etc.
Our Journey

This is the true story of 11 strangers…picked to testify before the DoD Comprehensive Review Working Group…

Advocacy

- Advocating for our military families
  - MPFC consulted as subject matter experts on policy proposals by White House, DoD
- Pool of families prepared to speak to various media outlets on issues they face
Advocacy

MPFC Community Study Survey

- Funded by an award from the National Library of Medicine, National Institutes of Health, Department of Health and Human Services
- First survey to focus on the health and mental health needs of the LGBT military community
- Will be used as a resource for further studies we can use to advocate for creation and development of programs to meet the needs of our families
Preliminary results and themes

- A majority of respondents feel that coming out would put them and their families at risk of negative reactions from the military community.
- While sexual orientation (S.O.) is not a strong factor when it comes to deciding whether or not to seek physical health care, it is a factor in whether or not to seek mental health care.
- While most know where to go to receive mental health care within the military, far fewer feel that the military has programs and services that would be helpful to them personally.
- Self-identified people of color tended to be less comfortable having conversations with their healthcare provider about the unique needs they may have as a member of the LGBT community.
MPFC Community Study Survey

- Qualitative responses:
  - spoke of challenges of working with healthcare providers who are “methodologically and emotionally unprepared to serve the needs of LGBT service members”
  - If service member stays in the closet, their family does too
  - Lack of LGBT-specific resources for service members and their families
    - Resources to address added challenges of stress caused by minority status
  - General apprehension to disclose sexual orientation and a transgender gender identity to providers
    - Lack of disclosure can be detrimental to health and well being
MPFC Community Study Survey

- DOMA prevents further progress in gaining equal rights and benefit parity for LGB service members and families
- Affects personal and professional success
  - Extra burden of having to worry how to provide for a family
- Affects mission focus
  - One of the most commonly expressed sentiments: “Make sure my family is taken care of so I can focus on my mission.”
- Employment is even more critical to an LGB military partner since no access to service member’s health care
- To the military, as a partner you are officially a “nobody”
What’s to come...

NCCOSC Collaboration

- The Naval Center for Combat & Operational Stress Control (NCCOSC) is a directorate of the US Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery and is tasked to improve the psychological health of Sailors and Marines.
- Building on the MPFC survey results, NCCOSC is developing a study of psychological health issues related to the LGB community within the military.
What Can You Do?

- How can providers take action?
- Develop continuing education opportunities around LGBT issues
  - Do a training around LGBT cultural competency
    - Connect with a local LGBT center or university resource office
  - Provide opportunities to earn CEUs
- Create an LGBT+ Ally group at work to discuss current issues
- Simply ask people what they need and how you can help…then listen
What Can You Do?

- Don’t assume that LGBT people will know they’re included in the services you provide
  - Disclose how your practice operates and make mention of being LGBT-affirming (to everyone)

- Be intentional about showing you’re affirming and inclusive of everyone
  - Could be as simple as displaying a rainbow or ally sticker
  - Creating an LGBT-specific section on your website
  - Using inclusive language and not making assumptions when working with someone
    - E.g. “partner” or “spouse” instead of boyfriend/girlfriend/husband/wife
What Can You Do?

- Stay informed!
  - Subscribe to newsletters, read blogs, visit websites of relevant orgs, find places that will deliver trainings
